In The Moment

“We do not remember days, we remember moments.”  ~Cesare Pavese

There are times where we have worked with individuals for several months and even years, and it’s the moments we experience that show us what we are doing is really helping! I have worked with an individual for almost 5 years, yet this weekend when we went to a Valentine’s dance together I got to see this individual in a whole new light. I witnessed this individual opening up to meeting new people; introducing herself and shaking their hands, and greeting others whom she has known from other facets of her life, without any assistance from me. This was a very proud moment for me.

Another moment was shared with me by my co-worker, Amanda Wells: “I work with an individual who has autism. This individual does not make eye contact and struggles with communication. However, yesterday, I greeted this individual and for two seconds our eyes connected; then it happened again. It was like having a year-long conversation in those two seconds. It is truly moments like this when we are blessed by the people we serve – they honor us with a glimpse inside. Words cannot adequately express how amazing this was.”

Send your moments to Lydia Clark at lclark@olliewebbinc.org.
